वसिष्ठोवाच
Vasishtha spoke

यो जीवस्यादितः स्वप्नो नानाकलनकोमलः तमिमं विद्धि संसारं न सत्यं नाप्यसन्मयम्।

(The Reality state exists as the world-dream always. It is a nightmare for the ignorant; but pleasant for the Knower. Since it is a world that is orderly and proper, we have to invent a creator for it; and therefore, the creation exists for us as ordained by some Creator. Creator is the term used for the orderliness that prevails in the creation.

Creator and creation; both are interdependent concepts.

If you believe that there is a world bound by beginning and end, and that it runs perfectly on the laws set by Nature, you have no other option but to invent a conscious or inert law-maker.

According to Vasishtha, the Creator concept is based on the reality you see in the world as an independent solid structure; but the world according to him is produced at every agitation of the mind newly again and again as per the whims and fancies of the mind-entity; and the laws and rules also prevail in it as part of the world-appearance.

Reality is bereft of all the perceived; yet it exists as the dream-like state of the world-appearance for each and every Jeeva as per their delusion and knowing level.

You cannot catch the Reality and stay off there like an escape resort to escape all this.

'This' cannot go away; since it is Reality's nature to exist as this.

To understand the workings of the perceived and make it a better place to live in; is the purpose of a Jeeva who is endowed with thinking power.)

That Svapna state as the very nature of the Reality state rises for the Jeeva-state and is pleasing with its variety of experiences. This particular world dream is sourced from the Creator of this world.

This world of this particular creator, is set according to his ordained rules.

This dream-state of the Creator alone is known as the Samsaara; it is not real (for it is a fleeting experience only); and not unreal also, since we experience it as real (the reality state bestowing reality to it, like a canvas supporting the pictures).

(The Reality-state cannot be 'known' or 'understood' as an outside experience; but we can know the fact that it alone exists as the world-phenomenon.

And the world-phenomenon is pleasing only, if you understand how to run the show by not getting caught up in the lined up Vaasanaa-fields.

Stay in the world as some a liberated knowledge-identity, as a formless entity devoid of limitation, enjoying the perceived scenario as a beautiful garden of flowering creepers which is always kept blooming in the spring of Brahman, the Reality state, which is the essence of all.

You need not worry about whether the world is real or unreal; for it will always be there as a mirage experienced by you, whether you are a Knower or the ignorant.

Ignore the mirage-world as a recluse, like Vasishtha; or enjoy the wonder of the mirage, like Vaalmiki; or close your eyes to the mirage and stay as Reality state only, like Shuka; or play the game of the world like a talented player like Krishna.

With Knowledge of the Reality as your vision and freed of all desires and wants; you can stay happily in any world-story as the Brahman-mind; and like a talented swimmer, swim freely in the turbulent Ocean of Bhava, the world-appearance.)

न पुंस इव जीवस्य स्वप्नः सम्भवति क्वचित्तेनैते जाग्रतो भावा जाग्रत्स्वप्नकृतोऽत्र हि।जीवस्वप्नमिमं दीर्घं क्षिप्रताप्रतिभासतःअसत्यमप्यवस्तुत्वात् विद्धि वेद्यविदां वर।स्वप्नात्स्वप्नान्तरमिव गच्छन्तो जीवजीवकाः असत्यमेव पश्यन्ति घनसत्यतयानघ।अजडे जडता तात जडे चाजडतोदिता असत्ये सत्यता जीवजीवानुभवमोहतः। भानोरप्यन्तरखिलं पश्यन्तस्त्रिजगद्भ्रमं भ्रमन्ति स्वप्नसंभ्रान्ता इव जीवा भिदालिभिःसर्वगत्वादनन्तत्वात् स्वस्य जीवस्य जीवतः यद्भावयन्ति चेतन्ति तदेवाश्रिति सत्यवत्।

(Every Jeeva is like a mini Brahmaa of its own world-experience, with its own copies of people and objects; and is the state of changing identities as forced by Vaasanaas.

Brahmaa or Viraat is a totality of one particular set of minds (brains) which see the same world of objects, unlike the dream-state where the objects of the dream worlds are different for each dreamer.

'Viraat' is a name given to the 'totality dream-world experience' of a single mind-process made of several mind-processes. His controlled-dream is the controlled-Jaagrata for the Jeevas of his creation.)

The world-appearance is the dream-like experience, but is prolonged and not dream-like because it is the Creator existing as the mind-structure with properly formed conceptions.

For the Jeeva-minds, the same dream of the Creator is experienced as the waking-state; and their haphazard dreams occur as a part of this waking state only.

Hey Best of Knowers! This prolonged life-dream of the Jeeva is actually momentary only.

Since it is a mind-conceived state, it is not real and is not a solid independent structure existing in solid space and time-frame.

Hey Anagha! Moving from one dream-state of life to another as different identities (with no memory of the previous existence) the ‘mini Jeeva-states’ see the unreal only as the extreme state of reality, because of ignorance. Dear Rama! These Jeevas conceive inertness and consciousness as their world divisions; and the inert state of the world is seen as the Reality, and the inertness of the mind-process is understood as the conscious existence; and always the unreal only is seen as the real, because of the attachment and addiction to the experienced events. Within the undivided shine of the Reality, these Jeevas experience the delusion of the tri-world and roam about lost in their dream-existences, with the belief in the varied division concepts. Since their own essence of limitless Reality is spread out all over (like the mind alone extends the dream-world), whatever they conceive, that alone they instantly experience as real.

पुण्डरीकाक्षनिर्दिष्टात्मसंस्कृतिं शुभां यामालिङ्ग्य महाबाहो जीवन्मुक्तो महामुनिः पाण्डोः पुत्रोऽर्जुनो नाम सुखं जीवितमात्मनः क्षिपयिष्यति निर्दुःखं तथा क्षेपय जीवितम्।

Hey mighty armed Rama! Taking recourse to the auspicious ‘Path of non-attachment’, the great Sage, who was liberated while living, the son of Paandu named Arjuna, lived happily the rest of his life without any suffering. You also live like that.

रामोवाच
Rama spoke

भविष्यति कदा ब्रह्मन्सोऽर्जुनः पाण्डुनन्दनः कीदृशीं च हरिस्तस्य कथयिष्यत्यसक्तताम् ।
Brahman! When will this Paandu’s son Arjuna be born?
How will Hari teach the path of ‘non-attachment’ to him?

वसिष्ठोवाच
Vasishtha spoke

अस्ति सन्मात्रमात्मेति परिकल्पितनामकं स्थितमात्मन्यनाद्यन्ते नभसीव महानभः। दृश्यते विमले तस्मिन्नयं संसारविभ्रमः कटकादि यथा हेम्नि तरङ्गादि यथाम्भसि।

There exists some indescribable state of Reality that we cannot understand through our intellect; we can only surmise its existence as our basic essence; and we have coined out a word named Aatman (the knowing essence) to refer to it (since the basic essence of all of us is the ‘knowing’ only).

The Reality state has to be the basic essence of all the basic essence inside all our divided selves like another huge expanse of emptiness inside the empty expanse of Aatman (as some dense deeper emptiness that supports this emptiness that makes up these world objects).

This delusion of worldly existence is seen in that taint-less essence only, like the bracelet seen in the gold, as a conception; and like the wave etc (various names) seen in the undivided ocean waters.

Like a bracelet in the gold, this creation exists as a mind-state of Brahmaa.

In this perceived of this particular Brahmaa, fourteen types of beings shine forth in this net of Samsaara like birds caught in a net. This creation needed care-takers and law-makers; so, these powerful entities namely Yama, Chandra, Sun, Indra and others who are praised in the Scriptures have become the guardians (Lokapaalas) of this world made of five elements. ‘This is meritorious’; ‘this should be sought’; ‘this is sinful’; ‘this should be avoided’; thus they made rules according to their own conceptions. Yama was the controller of the life-spans of the beings and rendered punishment as per their actions. Hey Rama! This Yama never swerves from his duties and is stable like a mountain in his mind even now. However as time passes by, Yama will feel apprehensive about his work and will feel remorseful about killing all. He will perform penance once in four Yugas to get rid of the sin acquired by the killing of beings on earth. Sometimes he performs penance for eight years; sometimes for ten or twelve years; sometimes five or six years; sometimes even for sixteen years. When he is thus away from his work engaged in the discipline of penance, he does not kill anyone of the world. Then this earth-pedestal abounding in beings becomes a difficult place to move about, and will look like the sweating elephant covered by abundant flies in the rainy season. Then Rama, the Suras try to lessen the weight of the earth through many different ways (by producing calamities and wars). In this manner, thousands of Yugas and hundreds of such narratives have passed away; countless beings of countless worlds have passed away. Now I will relate to you an incident that will happen in some future Yuga.

This Yama as Vaivasvata (son of Vivasvaan), the father of all ancestors, has to perform penance for twelve years after the passing of some Yugas; and has to abstain from killing the beings (in a future Yuga). Then the earth will be filled with mortals who do not die; and this land of Bhaarata will become pathetic-looking like a wasteland full of bushes. Unable to bear the weight of the beings, she (Earth-Goddess) will take shelter in Lord Vishnu, like a wife who is attacked by a robber runs to her husband for protection.

(Nara and Naaraayana are two Sages who are said to have incarnated as Krishna and Arjuna.)

Then Hari will descend on the earth with two bodies of Nara and Naaraayana accompanied by all the divine attendants. One of Hari's bodies will be known as VaasuDeva, the son of VasuDeva; the other body will become Arjuna, the son of Paandu. Yudhishtira will be born as Dharma's son; he will be the ruler of the earth and a Knower of Dharma. His father's brother will get a son named Duryodhana. His rival will be Bheema like the mongoose is for the snake. When these cousin brothers battle each other for the kingdom, a huge war will be fought with great armies. Vishnu will reduce the weight of the earth through the body of Arjuna holding the great Gaandiva bow. Vishnu with the name of Arjuna will be ignorant and act like an ordinary man moved by the emotions of love and hatred. Observing the two armies consisting of his own relatives and friends arrayed there ready to die, he will be filled with grief and refuse to fight. Raaghava! In order to fulfill the mission of his descent (destruction of people), Hari with the body of the Knower as Krishna will instruct knowledge of Brahman to the other ignorant body named Arjuna

श्री भगवानुवाच

Bhagvaan Krishna spoke

('Bhagavaan' is a title given to a person who has mastered sixty four type of sciences; and does not refer to just any realized Yogi of the ordinary type. Krishna was the most learned and talented of his times.

He was offered this honoured title by the great Rishis of his time.

Krishna, the dark-hued master born in the Yaadava clan, was the king of Dwaaraka.

He was a disciple of Sage Kapila; was realized by the age of eight itself under the tutorship of Sage Saandeepany.

He never was attracted towards the human pleasures of women and wealth; was a master of hypnotism; was a great wrestler; had assisted Maharshi Vyaasa in sorting out the Vedas into Upanishads and KarmaKaanda portions; had mastered many Siddhis; and was always in the Brahman state from his childhood itself.)

Arjuna! You believe that you are the body, and you are worried now about the death of all these people who are connected to this particular body named Arjuna. Understand first, that this body is not the real you.

The physical body is made of elements, is inert, is born, will decay and perish.

The essence of Reality within you the imagined ego-entity, does not get born like the body, nor does it deteriorate like the body. It is not something that has newly come into existence like the body, will not become something else through change like the body, will not change into something else also as a dead thing in a future time, like the physical body.

It is unborn; is always there; is eternal; and very ancient. That is the real you.

The real you is the essence of Reality. It produces the body-perception as a Vaasanaa-costume only. Even when the body is not there, it continues as it is, without any disruption.

Death never can happen to this perceiving awareness which is shining through a mind-channel named Arjuna.

If anyone thinks that this inert body can kill some other person or can get killed by someone else; both of them are not aware of the simple truth that the state of death does not belong to the inner self.

What lies dead as a body is the shape made of five elements only. It is just a picture perceived by the mind.

Body is just an inert thing made of five elements like all other inert objects that you see.

The real person is not the body; but a mind-content empowered by the Reality state.

That mind-entity will instantly produce another body as its tool, and will experience the same situation or another situation of life instantly, not aware of the death of the previous body-form.

No Jeeva experiences death, since Jeeva is just an imagined state of the Reality-state.

Every Jeeva is a superimposed limitation state of the Reality state.

Reality state has no limits or limitations. It is a single stretch of awareness undivided by the mind-construes.

Reality state is just a potential state which can rise as any probable state of experience, with a Jeeva-state connected to that experience. It exists as the world of any mind-content; as seen by that mind.

Reality permeates all like space and is not divided. Like the space cannot be destroyed by the breaking of pots, Reality state also is not destroyed by the destruction of the body.

The picture of the body which is imagined from childhood as a shape seen inside the mirror, and also as the 'I', is newly created at each and every moment by the mind.

Body is just an image produced by the mind. Body is just a sensed object.

It is seen as produced, is seen as growing, is seen as deteriorating, and is also seen as dead.

That which sees this change is changeless.

All these various changing states of the body are just some pictures produced by the mind, by its own self-created beliefs. These pictures are just pictures produced by the senses; and are not real.

The Reality which is the real self does not die if the body dies.

Reality state of self is subtler than the space element; is the innermost essence of all living things.

It is the Supreme Lord which exists as all.

How can it perish? Who can destroy it?

अनन्तमव्यक्तमनादिमध्यमात्मानमालोक्य संविदात्मन्संविद्रुपुः स्फारमलब्धदोषमजोऽसि नित्योऽसि निरामयोऽसि।

Analyze and understand that you are really the essence of awareness only which has no beginning and end like the inert body; it is never manifest as any shape (except as a knowing principle).

Hey you essence of awareness! You are just the subtle state of awareness or revelation or the luster of pure knowing.

That alone is you and your essence, and not this body which is inert and non-conscious.

You are not limited by the body entity; it is just a perceived object like any other perceived inert object of the world.

All the bodies are inert only and are not independent entities.

The Reality alone exist as undivided and reveals as the worlds seen through various mind-processes or agitations supported by Praana. You are untouched by the fault of the perceived scenes.

You are unborn; are eternal and free of all afflictions.

You as Arjuna and all the others standing in this battlefield are just appearances rising out of the quiver of Praana.

Nothing is born; nothing dies; but Reality alone exists as all these appearances.

अर्जुन त्वं न हन्ता त्वमभिमानमलं त्यज जरामरणनिर्मुक्तः स्वयमात्मनि शाश्वतः।

Arjuna! You are just doing your duty as a Kshatriya, where you have vowed to protect Dharma.

Even if you kill these relatives of yours in this battle-field as a necessary part of your duty as a Kshatriya, you will not incur any sin; for you never can kill what is not there in reality.

Your form and the forms of all others are just sense created images in the emptiness; and a life drama goes on as if real.

How can appearances kill appearances? How can imagined ghosts destroy imagined ghosts?

Discard the conceit of ego where you believe that you are a body born to some parents and are connected to all these enemies as a relative.

You are the Aatman which is free of the aging and death.

No one here also will die actually; since it is just a mind-made scene of a battlefield, as per the demands of your Vaasanaa. You have to go through it, to finish off this Vaasanaa; since you are still not out of the Arjuna-identity.

Stay as the eternal limitless undivided state of Reality like me; and be free of anxiety while performing your duty.

यस्य नाहंकृतो भावो बुद्धिर्यस्य न लिप्यते हत्वापि स इमान्लोकान्न हन्ति न निबध्यते।

He who is freed of the body-identity and the self-imagined idea of oneself, who is not tainted by the incorrect understanding of the truth, even if he kills the enemies in a battle-field, he does not kill anyone actually, and is not bound by the sin of killing (for the duty of the king is only to protect the people from the wicked rulers).

यैव सम्जायते संविदन्तः सैवानुभूयते अयं सोहमिदं तन्म इत्यन्तः संविदं त्यज।

This battlefield (or the life event you are facing) is your own doing, rising out of your own Vaasanaas.

You are experiencing what you own as the mind.

All this time you entertained the only thought of revenging your enemies; procured great weapons through penance and had vowed to avenge the insult rendered to your wife, the queen of Kuru dynasty.

That Vaasanaa of revenge alone has landed you here in this battlefield, and you are facing your own co-brothers in the battle-field as your enemies. Suddenly how can you run away from the scene that is your own creation?

Now it is time that you come out of these idiotic ideas of 'I' and 'mine' and analyze the true 'I' which is free of all Vaasanaas.

अनयैव च युक्तोऽस्मि नष्टोऽस्मीति च भारत अभितः सुखदुःखाभ्यामवशः परितप्यसे।

You are not an ordinary person of the world; you are Bhaarata, the descendant of the great King Bharata.

You are 'Bhaa-rata' also, because you are always attracted towards learning.

Why are you suffering like this like a helpless man, getting attacked by the joys and pains of the world-stories?

Why do you feel that you are incurring a sin by killing your enemies, and so will suffer in hells later?

Of course the killing of even an animal is a sin if done by any ordinary person of the world, who is moved by hatred and greed. But here you are not killing for fulfilling any hatred or for the want of a kingdom.

You are fighting the robbers who looted you brothers out of your rightful position as rulers.

These relatives of your have always acted unjust and wicked.

And if Bheeshma and others are supporting these wicked as part of their duties, then you have no other option left but to fight and kill them.

You are fighting to uphold Dharma, and not for fulfilling any personal revenge of yours.

This battle is the righteous battle that is occurring between the good and the bad.

How can you incur sin by fighting for Dharma? Why do you suffer because you will be inflicting pain on these bodies, and are hesitating now to wield your great Gaandiva bow?

All these idiotic thoughts of anxiety are rising in you because of your ego-identity only!

स्वात्मांशैः क्रियमाणानि गुणैः कर्माणि भागशः अहंकारविमूढात्मा कर्ताहमिति मन्यते। चक्षुः पश्यतु कर्णः शृणोतु त्वक्स्पर्शत्विदं रसना च रसं यातु कात्र कोऽहमिति स्थितिः। कलनाकर्मणि रते मनस्यपि महात्मनः न कश्चिदत्राहमिति क्लेशभागे क एव ते।

Only a fool who is identified with the mind-produced identity of the ego (as the body-self) believes himself to be divided from others, and takes ownership of the actions done through his mind-limbs which are activated by the three Gunas. You are a Kshatriya who is dominated by the Rajas Guna and have to be powerful and stronger in the body so that you can protect the Braahmins and Rishis who are dominated by the Sattva Guna, and so cannot fight.

You willed the destruction of the wicked as per your Dharma, and this battlefield has risen as the mind-field of you and all those others who are standing here ready to fight and kill.

Just watch like an audience, this fight between the evil and the good; and be a witness for the actions of your mind and senses, which are just used as tools for erasing the wicked out of this earth.

Let the senses do their functions and produce the scene of battle in this emptiness, as prompted by the Vaasanaas of you, your brothers and co-brothers.

Let the eyes see; let the ears hear; let the skin touch; let this tongue taste; and produce a world in the emptiness like a mirage-scene. What is real here? 'I' itself is a false entity who is not there at all.

What is there and who is this state of 'I'?

Just the Reality state is there revealing a battle-field as per the Vaasanaas of the mind-agitations.

Neither you are there as real, nor these people in front of you, whom you call relatives.

When no one is there, the scene in front is just a sense-created falsity, which you can only be a witness to without feeling any agitation. Watch the limbs of the Arjuna-shape fulfilling the Vaasanaa for fighting; and be equal minded when any shape falls dead, including yours if it happens so.

Though the bodies die, the minds of these others and yourself will not cease to be and will be alive in another perceived scene produced by their Vaasanaas.

The mind alone is engaged in its Vaasanaa-fulfilling event!

When you as a Knower of the truth understand that there is nobody called the 'I' here (be it you or these others), why you have to suffer this anxiety-state?

बहुभिः समवायेन यत्कृतं तत्र भारत एकोऽभिमानदुःखेन हासायैव हि गृह्यते।

This battle you are facing is not just your doing.

You have arrived here at this final scene of life after the prolonged suffering you had for all these years in a forest-life.

Your wife, your brothers, the citizens, the enemy kings and other world beings are also connected in this great scene of the battle, and this battle is a total outcome of the Vaasanaas of many minds (like the world we experience every day).

When something has been produced jointly by so many minds filled with their own emotions of hatred and greed and revenge; how can one person who was also one of the causes for such an event, suddenly feel remorseful and run away from it all? He will indeed be an object of ridicule only.

कायेन मनसा बुद्ध्या केवलैरिन्द्रियैरपि योगिनः कर्म कुर्वन्ति सङ्गं त्यक्त्वात्मशुद्धये । अहन्त्वविषचूर्णेन येषां कायो न मारितः कुर्वन्तोऽपि हरन्तोऽपि न च ते निर्विषूचिकाः।

The Yogis who are established in the self-essence within, do not get into such problems at all, since they are free of all the Vaasanaas. For instance, this battle-field was not any part of my Vaasanaa, for I have always been without any Vaasanaa all through my life on the earth here; and have done only the duties that belong to me as a king of Dvaarakaa, always established in the witness state of the self (the Turyaa state).

The Yogis who are in the path of Yoga do actions as a purification method only, as a Samaadhi practice (the absorption-state) and do actions without the ego and its body-based attachments.

Their body moves in the appropriate manner; their mind thinks the appropriate thoughts, their intellect makes the appropriate decisions; and the senses act in the appropriate manner; and all of these are under complete control, like the horses driven by a talented charioteer, who is seated in the chariot of the body.

The bodies of the ignorant are already dead by the belief in the death, since they believe themselves to be the bodies.

These fools are already poisoned by the 'I' of the body-self.

They spend every moment of their life in the fear of death.

They die again and again as the body-creatures because of the firm belief in their death.

Their actions are the weird movements of the poison-effect only!

The Knowers on the other hand are not poisoned by the 'I'-ness and their bodies do not stay poisoned by the fear of death since they do not own any body at all. The Knowers exist as the empty knowing state only, without the identity with the form.

Whatever actions they do, whatever joys they enjoy as part of the world, do not affect them in any manner, since they do not have any 'I' at all that lives and dies as the body. They are not afflicted by the poisonous virus that kills the body; and are free of all the anxieties that are connected to the ego.

न क्वचिद्राजते कायो ममतामेधदूषितः प्राज्ञोऽप्यतिबहुज्ञोऽपि दुःशील इव मानवः।निर्ममो निरहंकारः समदुःखसुखक्षमी यः स कार्यमकार्यं कुर्वन्नपि न लिप्यते।

What can a man identified with the body achieve ever? He will spend his entire life in pampering and beautifying the body, earn wealth to fulfill the body-related relatives, will always strive to possess something or other as lands, houses, fame and positions. But, everything becomes wasteful, since his body withers away by the constant pricks of anxieties and worries. When his body is tainted by the dirt of 'mine' as the attachment to inert and living objects, what can he shine as but a donkey burdened with weights?

Even if learned and skillful in many actions, even if he has the entire information store at his fingertips, everything goes waste if he is attached to the body-related possessions.

All the four goals of life, Dharma/Artha/Kaama/Moksha; the proper desire-fulfillment supported by the honest wealth procurement through righteous means, leading towards liberation; remain unfulfilled since he is polluted by the wants of the body.

On the other hand, a Yogi who has no mine-ness (and possession madness), who is free of the ego-virus, who equally bears both happiness and sorrow (as part of the fictitious life-story), is never tainted whether doing actions ordained by the scriptures or the ordinary actions of his day to day life.

इदं च ते पाण्डुसुत स्वकर्मक्षात्रमुत्तममपि क्रूरमतिश्रेयः सुखायैवोदयाय च।अपि कुत्सितमप्यन्यदप्यधर्ममयक्रमं श्रेष्ठं ते स्वं यथा कर्म तथेहामृतवान्भव। मूर्खस्यापि स्वकर्मैव श्रेयसे किमु सन्मतेः मतिर्गलदहंकारा पतितापि न लिप्यते। योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय निःसङ्गस्त्वं यथाप्राप्तकर्मवान्न निबध्यसे।

Even if you cannot instantly get rid of the ego as Arjuna, the son of Paandu, then listen as to how you should conduct yourself now, Do not forget that you are a Kshatriya and are born to fight the wicked.

Hey Paandu's son! For you, this duty prescribed for the Kshatriya class of people alone is befitting.

You cannot run away from the battle-field and live the life of recluse.

Your own nature of a Kshatriya will prevail in the life of a recluse also.

Though apparently cruel by nature, the actions of a Kshatriya leads to highest good, by protecting the good people who do not have the ability to fight the wicked. If you engage in the battle and fight the enemies to the best of your ability, then it bestows happiness in this world in case of victory; and higher worlds of heavenly pleasures in case of death.

Though it may be despised, (as a violent act), though different from the duties of other classes of people (who do not have to fight with swords and weapons), though it may look like unrighteous way of doing things (since it inflicts wounds on others), the duty that belongs to you as a Kshatriya is the best action to be performed by you as befitting your nature. It is not wrong and not unrighteous. Performing the duty that belongs to you without any attachment will itself lead you towards the knowledge of the Self gradually.

Even an ordinary man of the world gets the proper results of his action, if he does his ordained actions with sincerity.

Do your actions properly to the best of your ability without attachment, without worrying about results, without the fear of death, and stay as a witness only. You are a learned person and are the best of the intellects; it is not difficult for you to act without attachment to the doer-ship.

Even if fully absorbed in the actions of the world as if caught in floods (like me the king of Dvaarakaa), the intellect that is not agitated by the 'I' ness of the ego is never tainted (and does not get tainted by merit or sin).

Hey Dhananjaya! You have earned enough wealth and fame through your noble actions!

Be established in the Yoga of ego-less state and do the actions that have to be performed by you as the son of Paandu; and remain free of attachment towards your relatives and friends.

Here, you are not in a family union; but are standing the battle-field ready to kill the wicked.

The enemies you are facing are on the side of the wicked Duryodhana; and deserve to be killed.

Even if the outcome of the battle is a blood-river that destroys the entire country, you have no right to worry about it; since this battle is a joint-outcome of many events of many minds; and cannot be prevented.

Even if you run away, you will be chased and killed even if you do not wield your weapon.

You cannot prevent this battle which is happening in a large way as a joint result of many Vaasanaa-fields.

You are Paandu's son and are here to fight along with your noble brothers.

Destruction of the wicked alone should be your duty now; and kill all these wicked men ruthlessly; and establish peace in the kingdom. If you remain without attachment and do actions that belong to you, you will not be bound (by the results of the actions).

You cannot cry over what cannot be prevented.

If you had taken this decision of staying away from the duties of a Kshatriya when you were very young; may be you could have escaped being a part of this story.

But now it is too late! The Vaasanaas of all the people here are in their full form now.

Your Vaasanaa also is one of the causes.

What you have started has to be gone through whether you like it or not.

शान्तब्रह्मवपुर्भूत्वा कर्म ब्रह्ममयं कुरु ब्रह्मार्पणसमाचारो ब्रह्मैव भवसि क्षणात् । ईश्वरार्पितसर्वार्थ ईश्वरात्मा निरामयः ईश्वरः सर्वभूतात्मा भव भूषितभूतलः। सन्यस्तसर्वसंकल्पः समः शान्तमना मुनि सन्यासयोगयुक्तात्मा कुर्वन्मुक्तमतिर्भव ।

Brahman alone is there as real.

Brahman is the sun that shines as the witness of all the actions done by the mind.

Be the form of Brahman only, and manifest as the perceived scene.

The battlefield is just some probable state of Brahman rising through some Vaasanaa-agitations.

Remain in the quiescent state of Brahman as the Brahman and witness the actions of Arjuna, a false entity made of Vaasanaas. When the actions are done from the level of Brahman as the awareness state of Brahman, then one instantly is in the Brahman state only.

Then it is just an offering done to Brahman by Brahman as Brahman; and is Brahman only all over.

This is the greatest worship ever; the best offering ever, done to the Supreme Lord.

Who is this Supreme Lord but the essence of awareness within you; or rather which alone is you and you are within it as a probable state of agitation.

Offering all the actions along with their results to the Supreme Lord, with the Supreme Lord alone as your essence; without the ego-based afflictions; remaining only as the Supreme Lord of quiescence; remaining as the essence of all the beings; be the ornament of the earth.

Renouncing all the mind conceived realities; remaining equal in all the events of life; with a mind removed of all its anxieties and apprehensions; silent within without any agitation; established firmly in the 'Yoga of renunciation', where the ego remains renounced; doing all the actions that belong to you to the best of your ability; be in the state of liberation, namely the knowledge-vision.

Bhagavan! How are all these defined; namely the renunciation of attachment, the offering to Brahman, the renunciation in the form of offering it to the Supreme Lord Ishvara; the path of knowledge and the path of action?

Please explain these terms hey Prabhu, to remove the great delusion from my mind.

Lord Krishna spoke

सर्वसंकल्पसंशान्तौ प्रशान्तघनवासनं न किञ्चिद्भावाकारं यत्तद्ब्रह्म परं विदुः।

That alone is known as the state of Supreme Brahman, where all conceptions superimposed on sense perceptions remain quietened; where all the dense Vaasanaas remain subdued; and there are no thoughts about the world as anything to be discarded or sought for.

तदुद्योगं विदुर्ज्ञानं योगं च कृतबुद्धयः ब्रह्म सर्वं जगदहं चेति ब्रह्मार्पणं विदुः। अन्तःशून्यं बहिःशून्यं पाषाणहृदयोपमं शान्तमाकाशकोशाच्छं न दृश्यं न दृशः परम्। तत ईषद्यदुत्थानमीषदन्यतयोदितं स जगत्प्रतिभासोऽयमाकाशमिव शून्यता। भावोऽहमिति कोऽप्येष प्रत्येकमुदितश्चित्तेः कोटिकोट्यंशकलितः क इवैनं प्रति ग्रहः। अपृथग्भूत एवैष पृथग्भूत इव स्थितः पृथक्त्वं हि न पर्यन्तो नाहमित्यवगच्छति।

Those with fulfilled intellects know that any enterprise leading towards that state, as the path of Jnaana (removal of ignorance through Vichaara practice), and the path of Karma (conducive to the attainment of Knowledge, even while engaged in the duties of the life).

'Brahman is everything of the world, and the 'I' too'; this ascertained state is known as the 'offering to Brahman'.

Brahman-state is always emptiness inside; emptiness outside; the quietness equaling the heart of a stone; pure like the hollow of the sky; no perceptions; no seeing also; but staying beyond always as the unknowable.

From that alone this world-appearance rises as it were, as if slightly different from it; but is emptiness only in nature, and is not there really.

How does this world-appearance appear as if different from it?

This world-appearance needs an 'I' to perceive it in a limited form.

Chit alone as some minuscule point even of a minuscule point of awareness, rises as this 'I' with its limited field of perception.

This 'I' stays one with the perceived because of ignorance; and believes in the limited field of perception as the only Reality that exists.

This 'I' is just a point of delusion and rises as a false entity and sees a false world as its reality. Why should one stay identified with it?

Though not separate from Chit as the essence of 'knowing', this 'I' stays as if different and separate.

This separateness is not in the Brahman-state, since it is undivided. This separateness is not in Brahman.

This separateness ends when one understands that 'I' am not the limited -state of the 'I'!

यथेहाहं तथेहास्ति घटादीहापि मर्कटः स्वमीहैवं तथाम्भोधिः किमहंतां प्रति ग्रहः।

The attachment to 'I' ness alone is the attachment to the possessions of pot etc as mine; and is like a monkey that is restless and jumping from one object to another.

The 'I' of a person is actually synonymous with what he desires and owns as 'his'.

The 'I' is 'mine' only in actuality; a man suffers a lot even if a broken needle he owns is lost.

The ignorant Jeeva is made of his possessions only as the body, family, house, lands, properties, gold, riches, position etc. Since he is not stabilized in his mind, his 'I' is a monkey that restlessly tries to possess all the objects that he fancies. And by losing the precious body at death, the ignorant lose everything in an instant, with the life lived for no purpose. All desire-fulfillment are done for the self alone; but this self is not made of possessions.

This Self is like the complete ocean which needs nothing else for its existence.

Hold on to this self and discard the self that is made of possessions only.

Why hang on to this idiotic 'I', which is not the self?

विकल्पभेदे स्फुरिते संवित्सारमयात्मनि वैचित्र्येण विचित्रेपि किमेकत्वेपि नो ग्रहः।

This 'I' you hold on to as the self is made of possessions only as the body etc and is just a state of manifoldness.

The 'I' keeps on changing at every moment as 'mine' with the thought of an object desired.

This 'I' is different in the dream-state, is different in the waking state and is unconscious in the sleep state.

This 'I' is just a change factor alone; but there is another 'I' which does not change at all, but knows all these as outside of itself. Then, why not hold on to this 'I' which is changeless and is not dependent on objects for its existence and which is the same in all the three states of Svapna, Jaagrat and Sushupti?

इति ज्ञातविभागस्य बुद्धौ तस्य परिक्षयः कर्मणां यः फलत्यागस्तं संन्यासं विदुर्बुधाः।

You questioned me as to what is Sannyasa, the true renunciation.

Renunciation is not the discarding of one's duties and running away to the forest or hills.

Renunciation is not an escape from the perceived, or a disgust towards the perceived.

The real renunciation is the renunciation of this 'I' which is continuously changing in the form of its possessions.

Destroy the desires and attachment to the objects and people which are based on the attachment to the false 'I'.

When you understand through Vichaara the difference between the false self and the real self, then the false 'I' dies, like a ghost at the rise of reason. Then the attachment to actions as the 'doer' also dies a natural death.

The desires also vanish off and the real self is left back, as a completeness state.

Then there does not rise the conflict about the results attained by the performance of the duties.

The anxiety about the results do not trouble the mind any more.

This renunciation of the fruits of actions though engaged in action- is known as the true Sannyasa by the learned.

त्यागः संकल्पजालानामसंसङ्गः स कथ्यते।

Sannyasa is defined as 'Tyaaga', the 'giving up'. You should give up the conceptions you superimpose on the objects as auspicious and inauspicious, liked and disliked, beautiful and ugly, sinful and meritorious and so on. You must live in the world doing your allotted duties of life untouched by anything like a water drop on the lotus leaf. 'Asamsanga', the state of non-attachment is the giving up of all these conceptions superimposed on the objects and people.

समस्तकलनाजालस्येश्वरत्वैकभावनागलितद्वैतनिर्भासमेतदेवेश्वरार्पणम्।

What is Ishvaraarpana, the offering or worship offered to the Ishvara, the Supreme ruler of all?

There is no super entity as a ruler, but the Reality state alone gives reality to the existence of Ishvara, the deity also.

Worship of this real Ishvara, the self as you, is the destruction of the duality seen as the appearance of the world.

The world you see is rising from your own mind as beliefs, ideas, and memories.

When the mind is cleansed of its impurities, the Ishvara alone is left back as the self.

'Understanding only the Supreme Lord as the originator of all the perceived duality', and 'the dissolving the idea of duality seen in the appearance', is known as 'Ishvaraarpana'.

First cleanse all the heap of dirt piled on this real Ishvara in the form of the 'I' and its twin brother of foolishness; and make the Ishvara shine forth in all its glory as the 'knowledge vision'.

This is the excellent form of 'Ishvaraarpana'!

अबोधवशतो भेदो नाम्नैवेषां चिदात्मनि बोधात्मा किल शब्दार्थो जगदेकं न संशयः।

Why do you see the world as divided? It is because of your ignorance or lack of correct knowledge.

The world is just made of names allotted to haphazard shapes drawn by the mind on the emptiness.

No object is there as such in actuality. Everything you see is a picture conceived by the mind on the emptiness of Chit.

Time, place, objects are mind-construes only.

All do not see the same world; but world exists as a combined conceptions of all the minds.

Chit essence alone is there as the 'knowing' state.

Chit alone is seen as the divided state of the world, by the desire-filled minds, through ignorance.

What is the world but a host of ideas made of words and their meanings?
 Shabda is the disturbance in the quiescent state and rises as a sound named the world.
 Sound is not the noise; but just some misconception.
 World exist as the Shabda and the meaning superimposed on it.
 When you realize this fact, the division sense vanishes by itself; and the divisionless state alone is left back as real.

अहमाशा जगदहं खमहं कर्म चाप्यहं कालोऽहमहमद्वैतं द्वैतं चाहमहं जगत्। मन्मना भव मद्भक्तो मद्याजी मां नमस्कुरु मामैवैष्यसि

Arjuna! You always have seen me as your close friend Krishna, the Yaadava king.
 Though others see me as this form of dark-hued Krishna, I always stay as the Brahman state only; and the world I see is my own shine as the self.
 I as the self am in you also as the same essence shining forth as your mind-construe.
 I have changed the Krishna-mind into the Sattva-state of the self-knowledge.
 You are still acting as the ignorance-tainted mind.
 In my knowledge-vision I alone shine as all the directions; the world; the void sky; and all the actions performed through this Krishna-channel. I am the Kaala, the change-factor that rises as the world.
 I am non-dual principle which supports the duality seen as the world.
 I alone am as myself, rising as the perceived, yet without the perceived. I am the self shining through your mind also.
 Kill the Arjuna identity. Always be engaged in Vichaara, till you arrive at the truth of the self.
 Always be devoted to me only as the self, not to the deities with forms.
 Perform the Yajna of knowledge as the studies of Scriptures and offer the fruit of liberation to me, by realizing the self.
 Salute me, the self in you; for there is nothing else but me.
 Through the intense practice of Vichaara, you will reach me for sure, by joining the mind to the self-state, and making me the only goal of your life.

 Hey lord of lords! I always looked at you as an ordinary human till now.
 I understand now that you are not of this human birth.
 Though you look like a Yaadava form to my eyes here, I know that your real identity is something else.
 You also are a greatest Sannyasin in the garb of a king.
 Who are you actually?
 Are you any Sage with some identity, or Brahman state itself rising as knowledge to save me from my ignorance?
 Which one should I take shelter in? What should I understand you as? How will conduct myself towards you?
 How will I achieve that supreme achievement by taking shelter in your true form?

Hey Anagha! I stay as two-forms always.
 Though I am established always as the state of the Supreme Brahman and am always formless like the space expanse, I have a shape made of many parts and hold the weapons of Shanka, Chakra and Gadaa in my hands as the Deva-form Vishnu, and reside in the Vaikuntha. Vishnu-form is the form identity I hold on to and function as the protector of the tri-world. Here you see me in a human form as the son of VaasuDeva, which I have taken to revive Dharma on this earth.
 My supreme nature is beginningless and endless, which is the self of all. It is referred to by profound terms like Brahman, Aatman, Paramaatman etc. You are also in essence the supreme only; but you are not aware of it, and are stuck with the delusion of Arjuna identity.
 I am always aware of my Brahman-identity effortlessly, like you are always aware of your Arjuna-identity.
 Your identity is just a memory maintained by your mind; my identity is not a remembered one, but actual, and is not in need of the mind to sustain it.
 My supreme form is the single second less state and bereft of all afflictions that belong to the human-form.
 Of course, it will not be possible for you now to imagine even the state of Brahman; for your mind is clouded by anxieties, worries and attachments towards your kin. You do not know your true self because of ignorance.
 At least you can believe me to be Lord Vishnu with four arms who is in this human form now, and take shelter me and have faith in my words.

तत्कर्मात्संप्रबुद्धस्त्वं ततो ज्ञास्यसि तत्परं मम रूपमनाद्यन्तं येन भूयो न जायते। यदि वा वेद्यविज्ञातो भावस्तदरिमर्दनं तन्ममात्मानमात्मानमात्मनश्चाशु संश्रय।

Have faith in me and my words; follow my instructions with sincerity and take recourse to reasoning; then you will yourself understand the truth of my statements; will stay as the supreme self which is birthless and deathless; and you will not get born again (for you will understand that the birth, death etc all belong to the physical body made of elements only; but the un-dead mind alone continues as different life-states, if ignorant; and the dead mind continues as the JeevanMukta state. You worship the form-deity till your mind is purified and quiet, and then practice Vichaara, and understand the true self.

You are indeed a terror to your enemies; but still you have to conquer the inner enemies of attachment and anxiety.

If you really seek to acquire the supreme vision of knowledge, then realize that the self-essence in me as my self shining as Krishna or Vishnu, is the same self which is shining as the Arjuna-world of perception.

Minds alone differ; not the self.

Self essence is the Reality which shines through so many minds jointly as the world-appearance.

इदं चाहमिदं चाहमिति प्रवदाम्यहं तदेतदात्मतत्त्वं तु तुभ्यं ह्युपदिश्याम्यहम्।

You must be wondering why I am talking about the Krishna-I, Vishnu-I and also the self-I as different yet the same.

Self alone is shining forth as all the 'I's, as you me and all the others.

Self is not the self contained by any form or name; and is actually not any self at all; but is the Reality state alone which is beyond the comprehension of the mind. I will explain to you this truth about the Aatman which shines forth as all.

मन्ये साधु विबुद्धोसि पदे विश्रान्तवानसि संकल्पैरवमुक्तोऽसि सत्यैकात्ममयो भव।

This alone is the taintless vision of a Yogi who is one with the Aatman within.

If you also attain such a vision through Vichaara, then you also will rest in that state established in the truth, at all times. You will be free of the conceptions of 'I am Arjuna', 'these are my relatives', 'I will not fight the enemies even if they are wicked' and so on. You will stay as the Reality which alone rises as all the divided forms, and you will not worry about the destruction of these appearances of bodies, whether it is yours or theirs.

सर्वभूतस्थमात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि पश्य त्वं योगयुक्तात्मा सर्वत्र समदर्शनः।

See all the beings in the Aatman and Aatman in all the beings, as a single shine of Aatman.

This vision of truth will be achieved for sure, if you follow the path of reason and be one with your natural state of Reality. You will be equal minded at all situations of your life-story.

सर्वभूतस्थमात्मानं भजत्येकत्वमात्मनः सर्वथा वर्तमानोऽपि न स भूयोऽभिजायते।

When you as a purified mind take shelter in the single essence of the Self through Vichaara, you will see the Self-essence as the essence of all; and will ignore the divided state of the world like ignoring a mirage-river even if it is seen as real. Whether you are engaged in the absorbed state of the Aatman, or remain engaged in the life-duties, you will not swerve from this vision of the Truth; and will not be afflicted by the false concepts of birth and death.

एकत्वं सर्वशब्दार्थं एकशब्दार्थं आत्मनः आत्मापि च न सन्नासद्गतो यस्याशु तस्य तत्।

What will it be like when the divisionless is seen as real?

The Aatman (Reality) alone as the 'knowing', stays the many 'known'.

'One' alone is the meaning of the word 'many'.

That 'one' is the essence of Knowing that is within all as their subtle essence.

You as the Reality state are 'knowing' and staying as the world seen by a mind identified with the Arjuna-body.

I as the same Reality state am also 'knowing' and staying as the world seen by the mind that is not identified with the Krishna-body. I just watch the story of Krishna in it, but am out of it always. (Turyaa state)

I never swerve from the vision of my true self as Brahman whatever form I have to act with.

In that state of Brahman, even the word Aatman is meaningless; since there is no essence as connected to one and many, but that alone is, which is not the one or the many.

That which is not any 'I', which is not even the 'knowing state' is that Reality.

Even the Aatman is unreal in that state. (Turyaateeta state)

त्रैलोक्यचेतसामन्तरालोको यः प्रकाशकः अनुभूतिमुपारूढः सोऽहमात्मेति निश्चयः। त्रैलोक्यपयसामन्तर्यो रसानुभवः स्थितः गव्यानामब्धिजानां च सोऽयमात्मेति भारत।

What is this Aatman inside you and me that is empowering all thoughts and actions that we perform as limited identities?

It is not just in me or you, but all the beings in all the worlds are empowered by the same Aatman-essence.

Since the body is inert and cannot experience anything, the Aatman alone must be experiencing the world in actuality.

It alone is experiencing a life as all these horses, elephants, soldiers, your brothers, your wives, your enemies and as every Deva and Naaga and human and animal.

It alone shines forth as all these mind-construes and stays as those world-appearances.

That essence alone really exists; and not these mind-made appearances.

That essence alone is the real 'I' or the true self.

Why then, everyone experiences a different state of the world, good or bad?

Bhaarat! If the tri-world is imagined as a huge stretch of liquid, then each mind experiences the same liquid with different self-made flavors, and taste it all differently. Some taste is as the nectar -milk of knowledge-vision, some taste it as salty through ignorance. But the tasting essence is the same in all.

Taste is added by the mind and so the world appears different for each and every one.

But the one who experiences the taste is the same in all.

A Knower stays just as the tasting alone; but the ignorant exist as the taste itself and suffer.

अन्तः सर्वशरीराणां यः सूक्ष्मोऽनुभवः स्थितः मुक्तोऽनुभवनीयेन सोऽयमात्मास्ति सर्वगः।

You are not able to know the true self, because you are always absorbed in the 'known' phenomenon of the world.

You are identified with the 'known' called the body as the 'I'; like a fool getting identified with a tree that is always in front of him, and feels that he is the tree.

Search within for that one which 'knows' the 'known'.

If that is not 'knowing', then nothing can exist as the body and the world.

The 'knowing' alone 'knows' the Arjuna-world as a 'known'.

If it was not there, nothing called the world can be ever there.

That subtle experience within all the bodies, which is itself free of all the 'known' sense perceptions, is alone the Aatman which is everywhere.

If all the sense created knowledge just vanishes, then of course, no Arjuna, no battlefield, and no Krishna can ever exist; and that alone gets left back. That left over state is not supported by the perceived for its existence; it just exists by itself.

समग्रपयसामन्तर्यथा घृतमिव स्थितं तथा सर्वपदार्थानां देहानां संस्थितः परः।

Like the ghee remains hidden inside the milk anywhere and everywhere, though not seen, so also the Supreme exists in all the objects and bodies as their very essence of existence.

It is realized as the ghee-state, when the mind-milk is curdled by the Scripture-knowledge; is churned by Vichaara stick, understood intellectually as the butter; and heated by the destruction of the false 'I' through the heat of dispassion.

सर्वाभ्योनिधिरत्नानां सबाह्यभ्यन्तरे यथा तेजस्तथास्मि देहानामसंस्थित इव स्थितः। यथा कुम्भसहस्राणां सबाह्याभ्यन्तरे नभः जगत्त्रयशरीराणां तथात्माहमवस्थितः।

(When a BrahmaJnaani talks, he cannot but use the 'I' for Brahman itself as his identity; for he can never identify with the form he is acting with even as a pretense; so, Krishna here talks as the Brahman-I.)

The ocean is filled with gems that shine brightly at all times; their luster is not limited by the waters or air outside the waters; their luster fills all over as the undivided shine inside and outside of the ocean.

So also, I the Aatman am inside all the bodies as if inside; but not inside any body also, since the body is just a mind-agitation inside me. Actually, I am not inside or outside; but shine as the luster of 'knowing'; and the world shines forth as the 'known', as my very essence. My luster alone fills all over like the gem concealed within the waters of experiences as the inside and outside.

Like the emptiness called space exists undivided inside and outside of all the thousands of pots, I stay inside and outside of all the bodies of the tri-world. I like the space am not divided by the pots of bodies, rather do not know of the existence of division also as the pots.

मुक्ताफलशतौघानां तन्तुः प्रोतवपुर्यथा तथायं देहलक्षाणां स्थित आत्मास्त्यलक्षितः। ब्रह्मादौ तृणपर्यन्ते पदार्थनिकुरंबके सत्तासामान्यमेतद्यत्तमात्मानमजं विदुः। तदीषत्स्फुरिताकारं ब्रह्म ब्रह्मैव तिष्ठति अहंतादि जगत्तादि क्रमेण भ्रमकारिणा। आत्मैवेदं जगद्रूपं हन्यते हन्ति वात्र किं शुभाशुभैर्जगद्दुःखैः किमस्यार्जुन लिप्यते।

Like the invisible string going through all the countless pearls, acting as their support, yet not seen at all; the 'knowing' essence of Aatman alone exists in all the objects that are seen, including your own body-self.

Tell me, what exists that is not 'known'?

(Any mind-process can know only a little; and is blindfolded by delusion; so the mind of the ignorant Jeeva cannot know much; but sees only that much alone what the tiny mind-screen receives as information; and this information can be true or false. The Jeeva which 'knows' and believes the false Bodha is bound; the Jeeva which 'knows' the true state of Reality is liberated. But the fact remains that 'Knowing' alone is the essence of both the ignorant and the Knower.)

That which exists as the common essence of all the multitude of objects from Brahmaa (Creator) onward to a tiny grass shoot, is known as the unborn Aatman.

The Inner essence remains changeless and is not affected by any perceived state of any mind; which is just a delusion state of some level or other. Brahman remains only as Brahman (unchanged), shining forth just a little as the states of the ego, world etc, which are the products of delusion, like the slight quivering state of the ocean.

Aatman alone shines as this world. Who gets killed or who kills here?

Can the Aatman get tainted Arjuna, by the good, bad, or sufferings in the world?

प्रतिबिम्बेष्वादर्शसमं साक्षिवदास्थितं नश्यत्सु न विनश्यन्तं यः पश्यति स पश्यति।

Aatman just sees; is aware of it all; but is not a part of the world-story concocted by the mind.

Aatman is not affected by the imagined births and deaths of the Jeeves-stories narrated by the mind.

Aatman is the taintless mirror which reflects all the events produced by the mind-content; it is not affected by the presence or absence of the reflections.

He who is established as the Aatman which remains as the witness and which exists like the mirror for all the reflections called the objects, does not perish when the reflections perish; he alone has the true vision; and is not affected by the events of the life-stories.

इदं चाहमिदं नेति इतीदं कथ्यते मया एवमात्मास्मि सर्वात्मा मामेवं विद्धि पाण्डव।

Paandava! To explain the truth of the Aatman, I have to use words like 'This I am' 'This I am not' (dividing the Brahman state as the witness of the seer, seen and seeing state of perception, as if outside of it.

But actually Aatman alone is all; or rather 'all' is not there at all; but only the subtle state of Reality which we refer to as Aatman and Brahman in our limited vocabulary. Know me as that alone which is beyond description.

इमाः सर्वाः प्रवर्तन्ते सर्गप्रलयविक्रियाः आत्मन्यहंताचित्तस्थाः पयःस्पन्दा इवाम्बुधौ।

All these phenomena of creation and dissolution states occur in the Aatman as ego-based conceptions, inside the mind like the quivering of waters seen in the ocean. Mind is also an imagined name given to the imagination process, where one imagines the coolness (joy) in the mirage-river of the world.

यथोपलत्वं शैलानां दारुत्वं च महीरुहां तरङ्गाणां जलत्वं च पदार्थानां तथात्मता।

Like the subtle stone-ness concealed inside the rocky hills, like the subtle wood-ness concealed inside the wood, like the subtle water-ness concealed inside the waves, so is the Aatman subtly concealed inside all the objects.

It is realized only through the subtle reasoning process.

सर्वभूतस्थमात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि यः पश्यति तथात्मानमकर्तारं स पश्यति।

He alone sees the truth state of existence, who sees the Aatman (self) in all the beings and all the beings in the Aatman, and the Aatman as a non-doer.

नानाकारविकारेषु तरङ्गेषु यथा पयः कटकादिषु वा हेम भूतेष्वात्मा तथाऽर्जुन। नानातरङ्गवृन्दानि यथा लोलानि वारिणि कटकादीनि वा हेम्नि भूतान्येवं परमात्मनि। पदार्थजातं भूतानि बृहद्ब्रह्म च भारत एकमेवाखिलं विद्धि पृथक्त्वं न मनागपि।

Arjuna! Like the water in the waves which rise up in various ways, or like the gold in the bracelets, the Aatman is in all the beings. Just like all types of waves toss about in the waters, just like various types of ornaments like the bracelet etc are in the gold, so are the beings in the Supreme Aatman.

Bhaarata! The beings born in the material bodies (referred to as Jeevas) and the great Brahman; all these are of the same single essence (like the mirror and its reflections). There is no difference in the least.

किं तद्भावविकाराणां गम्यमस्ति जगत्त्रये क्व ते वापि जगत्किं वा किं मुधा परिमुह्यसि।

What else is there as support in all the three worlds for these states of births and deaths (other than the Aatman)?

What else is there (as the support) for the worries that clog your mind (for the death of the relatives)?

What other thing (is the support) for the world? Why do you get deluded for no reason?

इति श्रुत्वाऽभयं त्वन्तर्भावयित्वा सुनिश्चितं जीवन्मुक्ताश्चरन्तीह सन्तः समरसाशयाः। निर्मानमोहा जितसङ्गदोषा अध्यात्मनित्या विनिवृत्तकामाः द्वन्दैर्विमुक्ताः सुखदुःखसंज्ञैर्गच्छन्त्यमूढाः पदमव्ययं तत्।

Having heard all these statements (from the scriptures); absorbed in the contemplation of the Aatman with complete ascertainment; the JeevanMuktas wander on this earth, noble in disposition and with equanimity ruling the mind.

They have no ego-conceit or delusion. They have conquered the faults of attachments.

They are always absorbed in the Supreme. They have cast away all the desires.

They are free of the dual phenomena of pains and pleasures.

Freed of ignorance, they attain the changeless state through sincere non-stop Vichaara of the Self.
